THEME

“Development of Probation and the Role of the Community”

Policymakers, practitioners and researchers throughout the world have developed a variety of systems and measures of probation and community corrections compatible with each country's culture and society (e.g., policy, economic conditions and criminal justice system). In addition, criminal justice practitioners and researchers have conducted studies on the effectiveness of probation and community corrections.

The objectives of the Third World Congress are to contribute to further development of probation and community corrections throughout the world by sharing knowledge and experiences, taking account of social and cultural diversity in each country. The main theme includes “the role of the community” because each participant is expected to have a deep understanding of the importance of the active involvement of the community in the prevention of recidivism and the promotion of offender rehabilitation.

WORKSHOP

In the workshop, 12 sessions, which consist of 44 presentations and discussions by practitioners and researchers from 17 countries, will be held in line with the following main themes:

- Development of Policies and Practices on Community Corrections
- Evidence-based Theories and Practices & Offenders with Special Needs
- The Role of the Community

The sessions held under the theme of “Development of Policies and Practices on Community treatment” will have a variety of discussions about unique approaches of community-based measures in each country, international diversity, international cooperation, capacity building of professional staff, and Offender Rehabilitation Facilities.

The sessions held under the theme of “Evidence-based Theories and Practices & Offenders with Special Needs” will address evidence-based practices for assessment and effective treatment for offenders including sex offenders, drug abusers/addicts and violent offenders. Regarding “The Role of the Community”, there will be various discussions that include perspectives on the process of offender reintegration and the roles of those who support offender rehabilitation (e.g., volunteer probation officers, private sector organizations, ex-offenders).

These sessions will provide participants with great opportunities to learn from and exchange a variety of community corrections measures and practices from around the world.
