What is "Offender Rehabilitation"?

What should we do so that offenders will make amends and will not reoffend?

When offenders are released from penal institutions or juvenile training schools, they will lead normal social lives. However, some offenders may commit crimes or delinquencies again. It is important to accept offenders who have decided to get back on their feet in local communities.

Safe and secure local communities will be created by appropriately treating offenders and juvenile delinquents within society in a way that helps them become independent and rehabilitated. This can be achieved by enhancing public understanding and cooperation within the community.

This is "offender rehabilitation."

·· A CLOSER LOOK! ·

Recidivism Prevention

In recent years, the percentage of recidivists has remained high at approximately 50%. Therefore, the prevention of recidivism is an important challenge for the government.

The Act for the Prevention of Recidivism was established in 2016, and pursuant to this act, the "Recidivism Prevention Plan" was formulated. Moreover, in accordance with the Act for Partial Amendment of the Penal Code enacted in 2022, various programs were adopted for the prevention of recidivism. Some examples are reinforcement of probation treatment and measures for offenders who have been released after expiration of their sentence.<sup>1</sup>

Measures for offenders who have been released after expiration of their sentence

Offenders who have been released after expiration of their sentence have twice or more the recidivism risk of parolees.<sup>2</sup> Thus, as far as offender rehabilitation is concerned, efforts are being made for proactive implementation of parole and reinforced support for offenders who have been released after expiration of their sentence.

It is necessary to secure employment and housing after release, and to provide "long-lasting" support through multi-stakeholder partnerships between the national and local governments, and the private-sector community volunteers.

Various kinds of support in the community

In order for those who have committed crimes or delinquencies to lead their lives without re-offending, it is of significance to arrange schemes that allow them to receive continuous support in communities. To do so, local governments are moving ahead with formulation and implementation of their "Local Recidivism"

Prevention Plans." Moreover, efforts for construction of local support networks have commenced.

Note 1: Offenders who have been released after expiration of their sentence means offenders who have been released from penal institutions after serving their full sentences. Note 2: Parolees are offenders who have been released from penal institutions prior to serving their full sentences; persons released on parole are under supervision.

Seamless reintegration into society

Parole as a measure to promote rehabilitation and social reintegration

Eligible inmates in penal institutions and juvenile training schools are released on parole. Adult/juvenile parolees are under supervision during their periods of parole. Through supervision, necessary support (e.g. guidance, securing of housing, and employment) are provided, thereby encouraging smooth reintegration of parolees.

Coordination of the social circumstances for inmates that is used to arrange an environment for the prevention of recidivism

The status of a place in which a parolee will reside after release is investigated while the parolee is detained in a penal institution or juvenile training school in order to ensure that appropriate housing and employment are arranged prior to release. Consultation opportunities are offered so that aid and cooperation necessary from parties involved with welfare and medical care as well as family members and concerned parties can be secured. In this way, social circumstances after release are adjusted.

Urgent aftercare of discharged offenders for prevention of recidivism

Probation offices provide discharged offenders, such as persons who have been released from penal institutions after expiration of their sentence, with accommodations and meals for a certain period of time at the discharged offenders' request so that they will not need to reoffend due to poverty. Some specific measures are employment aid and teaching discharged offenders the daily skills necessary for leading a sound life in society.

Criminal judicial procedure

Supporting the rehabilitation of offenders and juvenile delinquents in the community

Probation/parole supervision nurturing sound members of society

Necessary guidance is provided with an understanding of living conditions. Aid for securing housing and employment is provided.

Probation officers and private-sector community volunteers including hogoshi work together to conduct supervision.

*Juveniles aged 18 and 19 at the time of relevant disposition are called "specified juveniles." They are under probation for six months or two years, or else they are sent to juvenile training schools for three years or less.

Through systematic assessment (Case Formulation in Probation/ Parole, or CFP), principles for instruction and support are determined.

See the next page for details.

Points to note

Seamless instruction and support

"Long-lasting" support for social reintegration is implemented through consultation services and supplying useful information, advice, and coordination even after the end of criminal justice proceedings as well as the construction and reinforcement of local support networks so that people who have reentered society will not return to reoffending or repeated delinguency.

Instruction and support necessary for assisting in the rehabilitation of offenders and juvenile delinguents

Examples of instruction and support

When offenders struggle with substance dependence

In order to combat specific criminal tendencies such as drug dependence, specialized treatment programs (e.g., drug relapse prevention and drunk driving prevention programs) are implemented.

Probation offices have been focusing on connecting probationers/parolees to continuous support by relevant institutions in the community, as well as providing programs themselves.

Group program (simulation)

When offenders have nowhere to stay or no one to support them

If offenders have nowhere to stay or no one to support them, they can be admitted to the National Center for Offenders Rehabilitation as well as offender rehabilitation facilities and the like (page 8).

These centers are attached to the probation offices to provide offenders with temporary accommodations as well as intensive instruction and supervision, along with sufficient employment support by probation officers.

National Center for Offenders Rehabilitation

When offenders have no jobs

The Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare have collaborated to implement

"Comprehensive employment support measures for released inmates," assisting offenders in attempts to be hired by cooperating employers.

Moreover, entrusted private employment support offices assist offenders to ensure that they are hired and continue their employment.

When offenders need welfare services

For the purpose of the smooth use of welfare services for inmates released from penal institutions who have particular difficulty being self-reliant due to old age or disability, associated institutions, such as correctional institutions, regional parole boards, probation offices, and the Community Life Stabilizing Support Centers established in each prefecture, collaborate to conduct "special coordination" for inmates, so that they will be able to receive welfare services promptly after release.

Systems for responding to feelings of crime victims

Systems for crime victims in offender rehabilitation

There are four systems for crime victims and bereaved family members. The government has assigned staff exclusively in charge of crime victim affairs (crime victim affairs probation officers and crime victim affairs hogoshi) in each probation office.

*Crime victims will be allowed to express their sentiments to probation offices for purposes other than expressing them to probationers and parolees (to be implemented around December 2023).

Redemption guidance program

Instruction and supervision are performed so that persons subject to probation faithfully endeavor to recover and mitigate damage incurred by crime victims. For example, they should fully understand responsibility for harm that they have caused, as well as impacts on and sentiments resulting from their criminal acts upon crime victims. They should faithfully compensate for the damage and apologize. The redemption guidance program is implemented for such purpose.

Pardon—Proof of rehabilitation

If persons who committed crimes deeply repent for their mistakes or change their behavior and are deemed to have no likelihood of reoffending, restricted gualification may be recovered, or execution of the remaining sentence may be remitted through pardon after giving full consideration to sentiments of crime victims and society.

Pardons encourage persons who committed crimes to be rehabilitated, and serve an important role in maintaining a safe and crime-free society.

Various people supporting offender rehabilitation from their different positions

Hogoshi (Volunteer probation officers)

Offender Rehabilitation Support Centers

Offender Rehabilitation Support Centers are established for each probation district nationwide, and they assist hogoshi with their activities and collaborate with associated institutions.

Women's Associations for Rehabilitation Aid (WARA)

Women's Associations for Rehabilitation Aid undertake a wide range of activities. Examples are crime prevention activities (page 9), activities for healthy upbringing of juveniles, child-rearing support activities, and assistance in offender rehabilitation facilities.

Big Brothers and Sisters Associations (BBS)

Their work includes "befriending activities," which support the growth and independence of juveniles through making friends with them. The BBS undertake regional-based anti-delinquency activities and group work, and they are engaged in the social contribution and participation activities of probationers/parolees implemented by probation offices.

Cooperating employers

By employing persons who have difficulty finding regular work due to their previous criminal records and histories of delinguency.

cooperating employers are private business owners who help offenders achieve a self-reliant life and social reintegration.

Cooperating employers support the recovery of offenders by guiding them to continue their working lives, from the standpoint of private business owners.

Offender rehabilitation facilities and Self-reliance support homes

Offender rehabilitation facilities

Offender rehabilitation facilities are managed by private juridical persons for offender rehabilitation approved by the Minister of Justice. They assist with the smooth social reintegration of offenders. Some examples of activities are supply of accommodations and guidance for employment and life skills.

Offender rehabilitation facilities assist released inmates who have particular difficulties being self-reliant due to old age or disability to smoothly use welfare services and implement specialized treatment focusing on drug addiction recovery.

Furthermore, offender rehabilitation facilities provide life consultation services and support for drug addiction recovery during the period until offenders have settled into their community lives after leaving the facilities.

Self-reliance support homes

Self-reliance support homes provide accommodations for persons without residences or families or relatives on whom they can depend through use of vacant rooms, such as those of nonprofit organizations registered with probation offices, and they assist in the establishment of their independent lives.

Rehabilitation aid associations

Rehabilitation aid associations play core roles in local associated institutions and groups to construct local community support networks and to assist in activities by individuals and groups that support the recovery of offenders through implementation of subsidies and training sessions. Moreover, they engage in publicity and education activities for local community residents and local governments.

Origin of offender rehabilitation in Japan

Column

Modern offender rehabilitation in Japan originated from the Shizuoka Prefecture Released Prisoners Protection Company established in 1888. It was founded by Mr. KIMPARA Meizen, known as a businessperson who strived for public good throughout his lifetime, together with Mr. KAWAMURA Kyoichiro, a vice-warden of Shizuoka Prison, and other colleagues. This company arranged housing and employment for released prisoners.

It also allocated 1,700 volunteers throughout the prefecture to engage in rehabilitation for released prisoners, and these efforts seem to be the precursor of the offender rehabilitation facilities and system of hogoshi. Japan's offender rehabilitation system originated from private initiatives and has been developing since the Meiji era. Many private volunteers including hogoshi take on the roles of private benefactors, even now.

Medical treatment and supervision are programs for promoting social reintegration of individuals who have committed designated serious harmful acts such as murder or arson but who are in a state of insanity or diminished capacity by ensuring medical care necessary through hospitalization or routine visit to hospitals/clinics. Rehabilitation coordinators (page 10), who are specialized professionals for mental health welfare, are assigned to probation offices. They conduct the following services in collaboration with associated institutions. In addition, they play roles as

Social circumstance coordination	Probation offices move ahead with arrangement of programs for assistance supporting community lives, ensuring housing after discharge and hospitals/clinics for routine visits starting while relevant individuals are hospitalized.
Mental health supervision	Probation offices provide necessary guidance and supervise relevant individuals' lives in local communities. They also hold care-team meetings, share information of relevant individuals with related organizations, and integrate treatment policies.

Understanding and cooperation by local communities required for supporting offender rehabilitation.

Crime prevention activities are conducted to promote public understanding and improvement of social environments that cause crimes in order to prevent crimes from actually taking place.

The activities aim to deepen public understanding for the struggles faced by persons who commit crimes and delinquencies and to generate acceptance of such persons as community members. By looking out for and supporting the rehabilitation of offenders and juvenile delinquents, an environment that discourages reoffending and delinquency can be created. The "Campaign to Give Society a Brighter Future — The power of the community to prevents crime and juvenile delinquency and help offender rehabilitation", organized by the Ministry of Justice, is an example of a

X Spread of Hogoshi value throughout the world

As is the case with hogoshi in Japan, community volunteers supporting the rehabilitation of offenders and juvenile delinquents play active roles overseas. In 2014 and 2017, the Asia Volunteer Probation Officers Meetings were held in Tokyo. In 2021, the World Congress for Community Volunteers Supporting Offender Reintegration was held in Kyoto, involving participants from countries other than those in Asia. Discussion took place about the significance of having community volunteers participate in efforts for the prevention of recidivism and measures for extensively spreading relevant schemes throughout the world, and the "Kyoto Declaration on Community Volunteers Supporting Offender Reintegration (Hogoshi Declaration)" was adopted.

Information about the significance of community volunteers in the treatment of offenders, including hogoshi, will be disseminated overseas in the future.

Probation officers are experts in offender rehabilitation. Probation officers are assigned to regional parole boards and probation offices. Through collaboration with hogoshi, probation officers engage in probation/parole supervision, coordination of social circumstances, crime prevention activities, and measures for crime victims.

Based on psychology, pedagogy, welfare, sociology, and other expertise, they provide instruction and support for prevention of recidivism as well as social reintegration.

Organizational philosophy of offender rehabilitation

In January 2021, an organizational philosophy comprising a "mission" and "guiding principles" was established.

All employees endeavor to serve the public using this philosophy as the foundation for daily services.

Mission

We shall prevent recidivism and repeated serious harm by those who have committed crimes and caused harm, and assist with their rehabilitation and social reintegration as well as expand local networks through which people support people. Thereby, we shall aim to realize safe and secure local communities and an inclusive society in which no one will be left behind.
